Minec promotes spaces for debate

UBV holds the III National Convention for Environmental Studies

Through the modality of participation in videoconference, from Monday to Thursday, the III Convention of Environmental Studies (Conea) 2021 of the Bolivarian University of Venezuela (UBV) was installed at the headquarters of the Ministry of Popular Power for Ecosocialism (Minec).

The meeting showed the progress, cuts or results of research completed in one year, in which students, professors, national and international researchers on aspects related to the environment participated.

In this regard, the Conea research professor, Larissa Slibe, indicated that the group is made up of research nuclei, which in this 2021 meeting present their advances and linking processes.

"We have climate change as a central theme for this year, and

They thanked Min. Josué Lorca for allowing the Environmental Studies Convention to take place in the spaces of the Minec in that sense we managed the first discussion on contribution to the mitigation of climate change through education, in charge of the director of Conea, Juan Carlos Santander," he said.

He added that the III

Conference on Architecture for Climate Change was also discussed, in addition to the III Colloquium on Food Safety and Nutritional Culture, coordinated by Wilmer Carmona, and the discussion on Comprehensive Community Risk Management, by Lucía Barboza.

"We thank Minister Josué Lorca for allowing us the Environmental Studies Convention to take place in the Minec spaces, for the support in the technology and communication aspect to achieve the meeting," he said.

Slibe pointed out that Minister Lorca had an intervention that he described as "extraordinary at COP26", with which Venezuela comes to the fore with the Fifth Historical Objective of the Plan de la Patria 2019-2025.

The meeting showed the progress of various investigations

Minec in Miranda state

Rescued seven birds of wildlife that were in captivity

The specimens are in the custody of the Minec

The Ministry of the Popular for Ecosocialism (Minec), through the Territorial Ecosocialist Unit (UTEC) Miranda, in the

Strategies to reduce tree pruning in Caracas are being

In order to discuss the pruning, indiscriminate and illegal felling of trees in Caracas, the Ministry of Popular Power for Ecosocialism (Minec), a working group was held with different organizations in charge of evaluating the aforementioned actions without the proper permission.

The meeting was convened by the Government of the Capital District (GDC) through the Caracas Security Staff, with the aim of addressing the complaints presented by President Nicolás Maduro, in relation to the illegal tree affectation that has been observed in Capital district.

The Minec expressed its concern that some municipalities and other entities that carry out tree interventions do not go to the institution to request the corresponding legal permit for the affectation, especially the corresponding one for closed trees, which are the sole and exclusive competence of Minec, as an entity empowered by law, to grant these authorizations.

Likewise, the Minec called for attention to the multiple entities and municipalities that arbitrarily carry out pruning and felling

In perfect gear, institutions of the Bolivarian Government attend to the problem of pruning actions, so that they refrain from continuing with these practices, under penalty of being subject to sanctions by the Public Ministry (MP).

To date, 592 certificates have been delivered in the country

32 certificates of Adequacy of Forest Industries in Aragua are delivered

With this certification, producers will generate work spaces in their communities

In continuity of the Days of Adequacy of Forest Industries, the Ministry of Popular Power for Ecosocialism (Minec), delivered 32 certificates of installation and operation, to people linked to the wood sector in the state of Aragua, with which it is 592 authorizations in the country.

The consignment act was carried out in the Santiago Mariño municipality of the Aragüeña entity, with the presence of the general director of Minec's forest heritage, Walther Chacón, the national coordinator of the Minec's Ecosocialist Territorial Units, César Solís, the director of the Utec Aragua, Anthony de Benedictis, members of the Strategic Command of the Environmental Nursery (CEGA) of the Bolivarian National Guard (GNB), Aragua State Firefighters, Forest Firefighters, Civil Guard Corps, among others.

In this regard, Walther Chacón, general director of Forest Heritage, indicated that "we are accrediting with the instruments of prior environmental control required by the Forest Law and all current environmental regulations, so that a significant number of sawmills, carpenters, warehouses of coal and wood, which had been operating in the state".

"This is part, I insist, of all the scaffolding that the National Executive develops in favor of strengthening the Bolivarian Economic Agenda and the economic diversification of the country. This is an important activity that adds around 15 thousand permanent jobs of a direct type in the national territory", he said.

He added that many of those accredited this Tuesday, carried out work illegally "that is to say, with a back to the current legal framework, with which many of their activities were not legal, therefore they could not work quietly."

"Based on this recognition, not only can they work in peace, they will generate jobs and contribute to the development of the country, but they can also be easily subject to the financing mechanisms that the Venezuelan State, through public and private banks, advances to strengthen the national economy", he affirmed.

For his part, César Solís, national coordinator of the Ecosocialist Territorial Units (UTEC) of the Minec, pointed out that "the protagonists of the day are the sawmills, carpenters, charcoal makers, depositaries, with whom a historical legacy has been fulfilled because the first San José was a carpenter, and here there will be carpenters for a while".

"The citizen President of the Republic has instructed us to strengthen Engine number 11, to reactivate it. As an example of this, here we are vindicating these colleagues, giving them their permits for the Adequacy of Forest Industries", he assured.
