Deployment promotes environmental awareness

During this weekend, multidisciplinary teams were deployed in eight entities of the country, to carry a message of environmental awareness, in what constituted the campaign for each house called "The Climate Crisis affects us all."

The commissions were headed by the directorates of the Ecosocialist Territorial Units (UTEC), the brigade members against climate change, the Misión Árbol Foundation, the Civil Guard Corps and Forest Firefighters of the National Parks Institute (Inparques), as well as those responsible for training Inparks.

Aragua, Bolívar, Carabobo, the Capital District, Guárico, Lara, Portuguesa and Sucre, were the states addressed in the first National House-to-house Awareness Day "The climate crisis affects us all", where a total of 4,876 people received the message.

In Caracas, the Ecosocialist Management teams addressed the La Ladera II sector of the 23 de Enero parish, a commission headed by the People's Power Minister for Ecosocialism, Josué Lorca, and the director of the National Observatory of the Climate Crisis (ONCC), Franklin Leal.

With the approach to the communities, it is expected to know the perception of climate change, its causes and effects, identify vulnerable areas and promote environmental awareness among young people through the Brigades Against Climate Change so that they can join to movement.

In this regard, the person in charge of the ONCC, Franklin Leal, indicated that the teams of the Ministry of Popular Power for Ecosocialism (Minec) and the brigade members against climate change, totaling more than 20,000 people, were mobilized.

"We are in the 23 de Enero parish, in a sector that suffered several effects due to climate variability, due to heavy rainfall that occurred a few months ago. More than 240 families living in a little more than 100 houses were visited in this area alone", said Leal.

With activities for the whole family

Cultural agenda reigned in the 62nd anniversary of the Generalísimo Francisco de Miranda Park

The Generalísimo Francisco de Miranda Park reached its 62nd anniversary and the authorities of the National Parks Institute (Inparques) celebrated it with a week full of cultural, sports and recreational activities totally free for all visitors.

With plays, birthday songs and the presentation of the Fundación Escuela Banda Show Francisco de Miranda, in the spaces of Café Cacao Venezuela, Inparques began the series of events in the vicinity of the space for healthy recreation.

The park coordinator, Ysa Terán, explained that sporting events have been held since Saturday in the area of the acoustic shell. "In the morning we had a fitboxing and dance therapy match.

In the afternoon, starting at three o'clock, cultural activities with traditional dances were carried out, and at five o'clock the night sport", he explained.

He added that the night sport was arranged for people who cannot attend the dynamics that they carried out during the day. In this sense, he explained that the night practices included the same ones in the morning, as well as samba. "They finished from seven thirty to eight at night," he said.

The space was inaugurated on January 20, 1961 with the name of Parque del Este and was renamed in 2006 by Commander Hugo Chávez, who assigned it the current name on the occasion of the bicentennial of the liberation expedition of the hero Francisco de Miranda.

It has an area of approximately 82 hectares and is located to the east of Greater Caracas, on Francisco de Miranda avenue. It is considered one of the largest sheltered areas in the city, where from very early hours the people of Caracas carry out various physical activities surrounded by nature.

It was designed by the landscape architect Roberto Burle Marx, who also sketched the gardens of the La Rinconada racetrack and the famous mosaic of the Paseo de Copacabana on the well-known beach in Rio de Janeiro.

The Generalísimo Francisco de Miranda Park receives approximately 25,000 people on weekends, a figure that makes the area the most visited in the national territory.

The general director of Inparques, Nathaly Trujillo, during the ceremony assured that the Park is 100% recovered in all its infrastructures.

Minec refines details for the reopening of the replica of the Leander ship

In order to observe the final aspects of the reconstruction of the replica of the Leander ship, the People's Power Minister for Ecosocialism, Josué Lorca, visited the structure that is located in the Generalísimo Francisco de Miranda Recreational Park, located to the east of the great Caracas.

The tour was made by the head of Ecosocialism together with the historian and filmmaker Luis Alberto Lamata, and a team from Villa del Cine, with the aim of generating suggestions on the construction of the ship's history for the appreciation of visitors.

The boat was conditioned so that people during the visit, in an interactive way, relive situations in the historical setting and value the deed of the hero Francisco de Miranda and the crew.

With the reconstruction, President Nicolás Maduro makes an effort to present the true history of Venezuela, in an important step towards the decolonization of the Homeland, facing the new era of the country's rebirth.

In agreement

They will recover the Campo Escuela Paramacay from Miranda state

Agreement was signed at the Inparques headquarters

The Ministry of Popular Power for Ecosocialism (Minec), the Miranda State Tourism Corporation and the Association of Scouts of Venezuela, signed an agreement with the purpose of starting the recovery and improvements of Campo Escuela Paramacay, located in the Municipality Reedbed of the Mirandina entity.

The agreement was signed at the headquarters of the National Parks Institute (Inparques), which is located to the east of Greater Caracas and headed by the head of Minec, Josué Lorca.

"This is a space where children and young people will have the mission of safeguarding Mother Earth, sowing the message and the Ecosocialist vision during their enjoyment," stressed Minister Lorca.

It is expected that the pact will be one more instrument of the set of actions carried out by the Bolivarian Government in the fight for the conservation of the environment.

More than 150 people participated

Minec and FAO hold workshops with the indigenous communities of the Caroní river basin

Work groups were formed by community

The Ministry of Popular Power for Ecosocialism (Minec) and representatives of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) in Venezuela, made a series of visits to the communities of the Caroní river basin in the Bolívar state, in order to develop knowledge exchange workshops.

The activity is part of the collective construction of the project "Conservation and sustainable use of biological diversity in the Caroní river basin", with the inhabitants of the upper and middle basins of the aforementioned tributary.

In this sense, three visits were made to communities, in which there was interaction with the Guardians of the Forest Organization and two workshops for the collective construction of the document, carried out the first fortnight of this month, with the assistance of more than 150 people from 37 communities.

The communities were represented by their captains, as well as by the general coordinator of the Captaincy and Captain General of sector 6, Ángel Páez, and the Captain General of sector 5, Jean Carlos Velázquez.

Among the participating institutions were the National Institute of Parks (Inparques), the Kumarakapay Technical School of Agroecology, the Samuel Robinson National Experimental Teaching University, and the Ministry of Popular Power for Indigenous Peoples, among others.

During the sessions, work groups were formed by community to discuss different topics, among which are: Basic socioeconomic information and participatory mapping of each community; lessons learned from the use of biological diversity and its current state; needs to be strengthened with the project in each community and vision of each community for the strengthening of livelihoods.

It is expected to socialize the scope of the project and involve the key protagonists that make life in the Caroní river basin, in the preparation of the text of the project, to obtain their contributions and recommendations, thus ensuring the appropriation and support of the community at the time of execution.

The actions comply with the provisions of the laws of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, on the prior, free and informed consent of indigenous communities.

The acts are in the context of the project presented and approved in June 2022, which gives way to the call for collective construction that reaches each of the four components that make it up, and whose objective is to "Improve the sustainable use, conservation of biodiversity and provision of ecosystem services, to generate global and local environmental benefits in the Caroní basin".

Compliance with the stages will contribute to Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) 2.4 and 15.4, linked to ensuring the production of food systems through the application of resilient agricultural practices, and ensuring the conservation of ecosystems and their diversity, for the purposes to improve its capacity to provide essential benefits for the development of communities.

Once the Project document is built, it is expected to be executed in a period of 60 months with the active participation of the indigenous and non-indigenous community.

Minec will be in charge of the landscaping and ornamentation

Sectorial Vice Presidency of Public Works will place containers for solid waste in the La Rinconada stadium

Given the proximity of the 2023 Caribbean series in Caracas and La Guaira, the Ministry of Popular Power for Ecosocialism (Minec) will place containers for the collection of solid waste in the La Rinconada stadium, one of the venues of the classic February baseball.

The decision was made during a meeting of the Sectorial Vice Presidency of Public Works and Services, held at the facilities of the Isaías "Látigo" Chávez stadium, soon to be inaugurated and in which the Caribbean baseball event will be held this year.

The meeting was led by the Vice President and Minister of Popular Power for Electric Energy, G/J Néstor Reverol, accompanied by the head of Ecosocialism, Josué Lorca; Attention of the Waters, G/D. Rodolfo Marcos Torres; Public Works, G/D Raúl Paredes, and the president of PDVSA Gas Comunal, Caryl Bertho.

Likewise, the ecosocialist entity will be in charge of the landscaping and decoration of the exterior and interior areas of the modern baseball field, with the purpose that visiting athletes and the Venezuelan population enjoy a space of healthy recreation and pleasant stay.

Preparations began to strengthen the Civil Park Ranger Corps

Representatives of the Ministry of Popular Power for Ecosocialism (Minec) and the Civil Park Ranger Corps of the National Parks Institute (Inparques), met to establish a work agenda aimed at strengthening the guardians of nature.

The meeting was attended by the General Director of Forest Heritage, Zoraima Echenique, the person in charge of the Minec Command Post, Ángel Ferrebus, and the National Chief of Park Rangers, G/J Pablo Lira.

Likewise, the directive of 0800-AMBIENT (0800-2624368), Monitoring Room of the National Reforestation and Community Development Plan, attended.

The meeting considered the possibility that the members of the Park Rangers acquire enough knowledge that allows them to coordinate, execute and verify all the information that flows in the National Park System.

Additionally, it was agreed to strengthen the issues of forest control, biodiversity, ecosystem conservation and legal advice. Also, through joint work with the Minec Command Post, a timely and truthful response is expected in the face of any eventuality that occurs in protected areas.

For the satisfaction of the population

Recovery of the Comprehensive Waste Management System in Nueva Esparta continues

The recovery plan of the Integral Management System for Solid Residues and Waste in the state of Nueva Esparta continues its march.

According to the spokesman for the Executive Directorate of the Econovo Venezuela company, José Luis Domínguez, a strategic alliance was formed seven months ago with the Ministry of Popular Power for Ecosocialism (Minec), for the rehabilitation of the new system on the island.

"The installed system is one of the most modern in Latin America, from which we have recovered the compactor trucks, which has allowed us to greatly improve assistance and the degree of satisfaction in the population with respect to the service we provide," he said.

He commented that at the end of December the company began with the "containerization" of tourist and commercial areas, consisting of placing containers for waste collection.

Solid Waste and Integral Management System

In Playa El Yaque, in the Antonio Díaz municipality, the first 50 of a total of 100 were installed, forged in metal, with a capacity of 1,500 liters, designed to resist exposure to sunlight, water and leached liquids that originate waste accumulation.

Regarding the compacting vehicles, these have special mechanisms for lifting the side load and emptying it.

Climate Change People, Planet and Life

The 2023 film forum cycle begins with the documentary "Masters of America"

The Ministry of People's Power for Ecosocialism (Minec), through the General Directorate of Training, reactivated the cycle of film forums called "People, Planet and Life Climate Change", with the projection of the documentary "Teachers of America".

The director of Dissemination of the General Directorate of Training, David Álvarez, indicated that the activity was restarted this year, with an audiovisual piece related to teaching, on the occasion of National Teacher's Day, this time referring to the Brazilian educator Paulo Freire.

"Paulo Freire was a Brazilian teacher who, through his life and work, contributed a lot to the transformation of education and the creation of liberating and transformative education thinking", he said.

He pointed out that Freire's proposal is "an education that sees the needs and adapts to the realities of the students and makes them participate in their training".

Training is a fundamental element for the life of the planet
